Silvia Solis is the Acting Attaché of Intellectual Property (IP) in Lima, Peru. She advises the Andean Region and Chile on IP matters and engages with the countries in her region to promote high standards of IP protection and enforcement, as well as to organize training programs for key IP actors.

Mrs. Solis was formerly a Technical and Legal Director at Clarke, Modet & Co., a leading multinational IP firm based in Europe with more than 10 subsidiaries in Spanish-speaking countries. Her responsibilities included managing the client portfolio to position the company as a leading IP firm nationally and internationally.

Prior to joining the USPTO, Mrs. Solis was the Inventions and New Technologies Director at the Peruvian National Institute for the Defense of Competition and Intellectual Property (INDECOPI), where she led the Patent Directorate. One of her main responsibilities included developing public policies to promote innovation management, patents, and research and development tools. Mrs. Solis also served as the Patent Technical Secretary at INDECOPI's Inventions Committee, where she created processes and defined profiles to ensure an efficient decision process of administrative proceedings. She has also been a member of the Governing Board of the National Council of Science and Technology (CONCYTEC).

Mrs. Solis was part of the negotiating team during the signature of several commercial agreements, such as the Trade Promotion Agreement with the United States and other free trade agreements with the Pacific Alliance trade bloc, China, Japan, the European Union, and other Asia-Pacific Economic cooperation economies.

Mrs. Solis holds a master's degree in Business Law from Pontificia Universidad Católica del Peru and received her law degree from Universidad San Martín de Porres.
